

EAGLE PALM AWARD OF SCOUTS IS MADE TO GEORGE HERMAN

Bristol Presbyterian Church
Filled for Court of Honor

REV. ZEPP IS A SPEAKER

Admonishes Scouts to Read
Bible, Attend Church, and Pray

Last evening at the union services of the Bristol churches in the Bristol Presbyterian Church the spring court of honor for the southern division, Bucks County Council of Boy Scouts, was conducted. The church was filled with members of the combined churches, Scouts, and their leaders.

The speaker was the Rev. Howard L. Zupp of the Baptist Church, who urged the Scouts to follow four principles in their lives. First, cultivate the companionship and friendship of the people who love God. Second, become acquainted with their Bible. Third, attend some church regularly. Fourth, never be ashamed to get down on your knees beside your bed, and pray to God. Rev. Zupp said that "one of the saddest things in life is to see boys reading trash, and not reading helpful literature that will broaden their vision, and outlook. Don't ever fail to remember that with God for you, who can be against you?"

President Thomas Ross, of the Bucks County Council, Doylestown, was present, and made the Eagle Palm Award to Eagle Scout George Herman, Bristol. President Ross stressed the need of everybody realizing that needs of the body must be taken care of but that we cannot shirk our responsibility to care for the souls of our boys. Their growth at this time must not be curtailed by a failure on the part of individuals to help carry the load of making possible the Scout movement to the Bucks county boys.

The order of service included: Organ prelude, processional hymn, invocation by Rev. P. R. Ronge, psalter by Rev. A. G. Solla, gloria patri, scripture by Rev. G. E. Boswell, solo by Mrs. Russell Johnson, second class presentations by Rev. G. E. Boswell, first class presentations by Rev. A. G. Solla, prayer by Rev. Clarence Howell, anthem, merit badge awards by Rev. Clarence Howell, Star Scout award by Rev. P. R. Ronge, announcements, offering, palm award by Thomas Ross, hymn, address by Rev. H. L. Zupp, Scouter's training course certificates by Rev. H. L. Zupp, and Past President Thomas B. Stockham of Morrisville. Mr. Stockham also presented the five year service award to Scoutmaster William Schofield, Morrisville. No. 1, hymn, benediction, taps blown by Charles Brodie, and the organ postlude.

Other awards included: Second Class: Samuel Leiper and Benjamin Ponczek, of Bristol; William Henderson and Everett Johnson, of Cornwells; Louis Beisel, Charles Paulsworth, William Paulsworth, Arnold Schoenbacker and Edward Scank, of Croydon; Fisher Brooks, Norman Ettenger, Joseph Skirrim, Sidney Snelson, Vincent Sawyer, Wilmer Solts, Harold Washburn and Richard Young, of Morrisville.

S. S. "Bristol City" Steams Down River Outward Bound

The S. S. "Bristol City" sailed down the Delaware River Saturday afternoon, passing Bristol at 1:20. The ship sounded her siren as she passed the water pumping station and the deep-throated fire whistle at the plant was blown in return to the salute.

The ship left Trenton port under her own steam and without the assistance of a tug. There were 2,000 persons at Trenton to bid the captain and crew farewell.

Captain D. N. Reece was presented with a small volume of newspaper clippings telling of the British steamship's arrival on July 4th, together with a folio of photographs of the reception at the port.

Arrange Reservations For Langhorne Meeting

Mrs. Henry Parry, chairman of gardens in the Bucks County Federation of Women's Clubs, has invited all garden club members and others interested to her home, Glen Grove Farm, near Langhorne, Thursday, July 21st, to hear Mrs. Frank Kaiser, state chairman of gardens, who is coming to Bucks County to meet all garden lovers.

Mrs. Kaiser will speak at 10:30 a. m. The garden section of Langhorne Sorosis will be the hostess group, and will serve a luncheon at the Presbyterian Sunday School room for a nominal sum; or those attending may take a box luncheon if they prefer. Those from Bristol planning to attend are asked to notify Mrs. Earl Tomb, phone 3004, for luncheon reservations before July 14th.

A number of gardens in Langhorne as well as the bird haven will be visited after lunch, and the garden center will be open to all.

Arrest Two Motorists For Disorderly Conduct

Leaving a party near Parkland where they said they had a few drinks of "root beer," two Philadelphia youths, in a dilapidated automobile, one of them playing an accordion, were arrested early yesterday morning on a disorderly conduct charge, as they allegedly zig-zagged toward Trenton.

Arrested by Highway Patrolman Diem on the Lincoln Highway, South Langhorne, Lewandowski, driver of the machine, which had to be towed off the road, was sentenced to 25 days in jail on charges, in addition to disorderly conduct, of reckless driving and operating a machine without a license. Wilkowsky, the accordion player, was fined $10 and remanded to jail until it was paid.

KARP GIVES FRANKFORD ARROWS ONE LONE HIT

Enables Croydon Nine to Win in Sunday Game,
12 to 2

CROYDON GETS 15 HITS

CROYDON, July 11.—"Chesty" Karp was in fine form here yesterday afternoon as he set down the Frankford Arrows with but one hit and enabled the home club to win 12-2.

The only bingle made from the delivery of Karp was a long drive to left field by P. Rihl which went for three bases and scored one of the two runs made off the Croydon hurler.

Meanwhile the home club was having an easy time solving the slants of A. Rihl and Wainright, a total of fifteen safe hits coming from their bats. Baker led the assault of the opposing hurlers with four out of five times at bat. Strump, Holland, and Oppman had two hits each, Strump getting a double and single and Oppman and Holland getting a triple and one base bloop.

Plans Three Stop Hop 'Round World

Not satisfied with the fame won by his flight from Maine to Spain and thence to Rome, Roger Q. Williams will hop off from New York soon in an attempt to circle the world with only three stops for refueling. Williams, shown above with his Bellanca plane, the "Roma," will take two co-pilots and two passengers with him. The "Roma" is the same ship in which he and Capt. Yancey made the trans-Atlantic crossing in 1929. Williams hopes to beat the world circling record held by Wiley Post and Harold Gatty despite the fact that the "Roma" is considerably slower than the Lockheed "Winnie May" used by the record holders.

CHANGING OCCUPATIONS

Those who would follow the crowd will now enter the occupational fields of transportation, communication, trade, the professions, domestic and personal service and clerical occupations. The trend of workers is no longer toward the manufacturing industries or the farm.

Four general divisions of occupations showed a decrease in actual number of workers during the period covered by the last decennial census. These were agriculture, forestry, fishing and extracting of minerals. The manufacturing and mechanical industries increased their workers but the increase did not keep up with the growth of population.

Telephone, telegraph and power companies offer the largest new fields for occupation. These industries added hundreds of thousands of workers during the last decade, and will add many more once the country returns to normal.

While the railroads have been furloughing workers by the hundreds of thousands bus and truck lines have been taking them on faster than the roads have laid them off. For every truck or bus there must be at least one worker, whereas a freight train of a hundred cars filled with more goods than 200 trucks can carry requires a crew of not more than six men.

Occupational lines are never fixed. The most promising field for the young man of today may be a field devoid of all opportunity 10 or 20 years from now. Picking a career involves a lot of luck as well as good judgment.

LIBERTY AT A PRICE

Unless sentiment changes in the meantime, the Hawes-Cutting bill, authorizing a plebiscite on independence in the Philippine Islands after 15 years, will become law at the next regular session of congress. The House has already adopted a similar bill and had time permitted the Senate would have done likewise this summer.

It is, therefore, almost certain that these wards of Uncle Sam will decide on their own sovereignty within 15 years. Prior to the plebiscite autonomous government will prevail for a time as a sort of preparatory school to the great university of self-government.

Part of the schooling will consist of trading with the United States on the same terms with other foreign countries. That means a high tariff on Filipino sugar and other products now entering the United States duty free.

So the question of independence will not be decided on idealism alone. The dollar sign will cast its ominous shadow across the issue, influencing the vote of those who may find political liberty not worth the price of economic disadvantage. The Philippines have never been too idealistic to take advantage of the economic obligations the United States has felt toward its unwilling charge.

Might as well put something by for old age so you can retire instead of just giving up.

Just in case nobody remembers to mention it between now and November: Get out and vote.

CHAPTER FORTY-NINE

The wives of John and Ernest kissed everybody, thanked Bess for the lovely supper.

"Well, let's get along," Bess' husband said. "I got four cows to milk, besides the regular chores."

They were all a little reluctant to leave the old house. It seemed so funny, to lock it up. It had never been locked, while mother lived.

"I hope the cat stays with Mrs. Burpee all right, and don't come running back here," Bess worried. "I'll have to get somebody to keep the garden watered till the rains start. You can't depend on dad any more."

"Now if there's anything I can do for any of you, just call on me!" said the minister's wife, with a last, lingering look at Lily Lou.

"Well, get in, girls," Raymond said.

Lily Lou waited two days more. "I must say you've gotten nervous. You never used to be fidgety," May said. "And I don't understand your not wanting to sing for us. That was one thing none of us would stand for when you were a kid. We couldn't stand these 'don't wanna' kids. I must say, you were always ready to sing or play then!"

"It's just because I'm so tired, and a coloratura voice is so delicate. To sing when you're tired—"

Raymond and May exchanged glances.

"What did I tell you? High hat, already!" they seemed to say.

They took her to call on Irene, who was visiting her husband's mother, in San Francisco.

Lily Lou would hardly have known her, she was so changed. So much more attractive. Plump, laughing and happy.

Lily Lou could have bit off her tongue, it was so hard to keep from telling about the buben, as she held Irene's tiny girl on her lap, ran her fingers through the flaxen curls.

That night she asked Raymond to make her reservations for the next day. "I must get back," she told them. "I know that it seems such a short visit, for such a long trip, but I've got to get back. I've a feeling that I've been away too long already."

May and Ray exchanged glances again.

Because there was nothing more to say, and she was afraid of saying too much, she picked up the evening paper, turned its pages.

Staring out of the society section was the face that had haunted her, that had never been really out of her thoughts for months.

"Peggy Sage has her picture in the paper again."

"I wouldn't be surprised," May said, without looking up. "It's a poor week that she doesn't get it in once."

"Miss Peggy Sage, daughter of Captain and Mrs. Vincent Sage, whose wedding to Mr. Claude Orffington Newman will be an event of early autumn..."

Peggy, going to marry Claude Orffington Newman.

Then, she couldn't be going to marry Ken . . . not that it mattered, of course.

"May, wasn't she engaged to my ex-husband?"

"Who, the Sage girl? Oh, yes. Heavens, it was all over all the papers. Didn't I send you them? I meant to. I thought that at least he might have waited a decent interval! Well, you can be darn glad you got out of THAT, Lily Lou. He did the same thing to Peggy he did to you. He—"

Lily Lou turned her face from the light. "He—what? What did he do?"

"Didn't I send you the papers? I meant to. It was the time you were abroad. Are you sure you didn't get them? I told Raymond at the time, I said, 'You can't tell me that I doubted it. Only my goodness, we they deliver all the mail over there, I said—"

"But what was it he did?"

"Oh! Well, the Sages tried to fix it so that it would look as though Raymond broke the engagement, but Raymond brought home one of those society scandal sheets one of the men at the factory had, and it said that he broke it and left her flat, and it said—hinted you know about another affair he had—oh, they didn't have your name at all! Thank goodness for that! But about a marriage having been annulled, I said to Raymond at the time, I said 'Thank fortune WE'RE not dragged into,' I said. I might not have sent you the scandal sheet because Raymond took it back, I think, but I certainly did get you the other papers and mail them. I remember distinctly, thinking at the time that I could just as well put in a little gift and it would get by without duty. Lots of people—"

"I didn't get them. You might have written—"

"Written! Don't talk to me about writing. You never wrote any of us to, amount to anything. I never had anything as unsatisfactory as your letters from Europe, especially Vienna, a place I've always been interested in on account of the Merry Widow, and all those Vienna comedies, and the Blue Danube and all. Really there were times when I—well, I wondered if you ever went to Europe. I know that Raymond doubted it sometimes."

"I was there all right. My goodness, didn't I send mother the clippings from the Paris papers when I sang Micaela in Carmen—"

"No. You said you were going to. But she never got them."

Lily Lou spread her hands—a gesture borrowed, though she did not know it, from Madame Nahman.

"Well, I can't help that now. It wasn't much of a notice anyway. Just said my 'small voice was sweet and flexible,' and it said I made an appealing Micaela or something like that. Nahman was the whole show—"

May looked at her, a little aggrieved still. "I didn't say I doubted it. Only my goodness, we

CORNWELLS NINE WINS OVER COLORED EAGLES

(By H. States)

Cornwells A. A. added two more victories to its winning column over the week-end by downing the Pennsylvania Colored Eagles to the tune of 17-14 and 11-5. In the former tilt both teams did quite a bit of slugging for a grand total of 43 safe bingles. Seven pitchers were used by the teams and Sullivan was finally credited with the win.

The Sunday game was more interesting although both teams hit the ball hard. Dean did fine work for the locals and was in trouble only once in the fifth inning, when the Eagles crossed the rubber four times.

For the Red Sox, Tomlinson was the leading stickman, with two singles and a double. Donharl connected with one of Lisby's slats for a home run in the fifth with F. Bowman on the keystone sack. Pew did yeoman work for the visitors, getting three safe blows, one being a long double.

The Mackmen are playing wonderful ball, having won 17 of 21 games played.
